Bad things. A death-chamber revelation brings ex-FBI agent Arden Davis out of retirement to help catch the madman who murdered her family. When a mysterious stranger named Nathan Fury asks Arden Davis to return to the Hill—a former asylum now used for clandestine projects—to help profile her family's killer, she has no choice but to return to that dark place. Even if it destroys her mind. Even if it kills her. Years ago, seeking a way to endure her horrific past, Arden participated in an experiment to bleach her mind, erase the bad things. Now, struggling to uncover the truth, she can no longer distinguish between friends and enemies. Only one thing is clear: the killer is closer than she thought. As the line between reality and illusion blurs, as paranoia and suspicion build, Arden suspects she is a pawn in a bigger game. She suspects a cover up. She suspects acquaintances new and old. Most frightening of all, she suspects herself.
