Dreamwatch.com, true paranormal experiences of ordinary people, began as a hobby. It was supposed to be fun--until premonitions from around the world predict the same catastrophic attack. The last time reluctant psychic Kate Kasabian revealed a prediction, people got hurt. But with thousands of lives at risk, she has no choice but to badger her by-the-book FBI brother to investigate. He refuses to help. When she sets off to prove her suspicions, he thinks he's heard the last of her supernatural silliness--until the legendary Matt Chase from Counterterrorism alerts agents about a credible threat. Every detail of Chase's briefing is identical to Kate's warnings. Tracking clues from New York to Prague to New England--and beyond--Kate is guided by her psychic dreams, and premonitions submitted to her site, while Chase relies on technology and intelligence to stop the U.S. plot. But will it be enough to prevent the attack?
